U.S. Employer’s Guide to Hiring UC Berkeley International Students
The purpose of this guide is to inform U.S. employers about:

- International students’ F-1 and J-1 work authorization options
- The ease of procedures and costs involved when hiring UC Berkeley international students for internships or full-time opportunities after graduation
- How the Career Center can support employers’ recruiting efforts

LEGAL NOTICE:
This guide is not intended to and does not serve as legal advice; it is for informational purposes only. Berkeley International Office serves UCB international students directly and does not give immigration advice or respond to questions from employers. Content is subject to change. Employers are advised to consult an experienced U.S. immigration attorney with any additional questions.
Career Center and Berkeley International Office: How we support employers and international students

The Career Center prepares undergraduates, graduate students, and alumni to make informed decisions about their futures by providing comprehensive resources, programs, and counseling on career development, internships, employment, and graduate school.

We offer a wide variety of employer services designed to facilitate employers’ access to Cal’s extremely talented students and alumni such as Career Fairs, On-Campus Recruiting, Employer Info Sessions, etc. We are unable to screen students’ immigration status on behalf of employers; however, our Career Counselor for International Students is available to consult with employers on effective ways to recruit Cal international students.

Berkeley International Office’s (BIO) mission is to enhance the academic experiences of international students and scholars by providing the highest levels of knowledge and expertise in advising, immigration services, advocacy, and programming to the UC Berkeley campus community.

Berkeley International Office seeks to empower students with the knowledge they need to navigate their visa status, including seeking and obtaining the authorization to work. While it is the student’s responsibility to seek information on this authorization, the information in this guide provides a consolidated version of information publicly available on the BIO website. This information pertains to Berkeley sponsored students only and may not apply to students at other institutions.
Why Hire International Students?

UC Berkeley international students represent 120 countries and pursue a diverse array of degrees and career goals. They possess qualities that top employers seek:

- Global perspectives with diverse viewpoints and experiences
- Multilingual and cross-cultural communication skills that are vital for companies to compete in a global economy
- Effective leadership and teamwork skills along with the ability to adapt to changes and persevere

Berkeley International Office’s International Student Enrollment Reports provide more information about our students’ demographics and education pursuits.

The majority of UCB international students are in F-1 or J-1 immigration status that includes off-campus work authorization benefits during and after the academic program. The remainder of this guide provides an overview of these work authorization options along with long-term employment visa options and resources. We hope the information will help to clarify and streamline the hiring process of international students.

Important Note:
Employers should note that a Social Security Number alone is not sufficient proof of work authorization for international students. It is critical that employers confirm an international student’s work authorization prior to the employment start date to prevent any liability for the student and the employer in the future.
